

Abstract

A semi-conducting device has at least one layer doped with a doping agent and a layer of another type deposited on the doped layer in a single reaction chamber. An operation for avoiding the contamination of the other layer by the doping agent separates the steps of depositing each of the layers.